

NTA response to query on plans for Ballymoneen Road Upper Bus

I refer to your enquiry dated 27th of April 2026.

Working with Galway City Council, we have identified a site for a new terminus near the northern end of the Ballymoneen Road. The council owns the land and has plans for a housing development there. A layout incorporating a bus terminus has been agreed in principle with them. However, the last stretch of road (about 400m) leading to the terminus site currently appears somewhat narrow for a relatively frequent, two-way bus service. This is the part which would be rebuilt as part of developing the planned Galway Ring Road.

As the timescale for the new terminus depends on the housing development and on the approach road, we are therefore looking at alternatives for the interim, using existing roads. Unfortunately, none of the side-roads off the Ballymoneen Road has proved suitable for a terminus. At this stage it therefore appears that an interim service could only run as far as the junction with the Western Distributor Road. Although this would allow the other benefits of the new route to be delivered as part of BusConnects, it unfortunately does not serve residents on the Ballymoneen Road.

I trust that the above is of assistance.

Yours Sincerely,

Richard Kelly, NTA Oireachtas Liasion
